NEO

WHAT?

ORACLE

YOUR NEXT LIFE MAYBE, WHO KNOWS? THAT'S THE WAY THESE THINGS GO.

WHAT IS A 'REAL' DOMINANT?

They might have never experienced leading another person, they might not even know how to do it, or how to make it work. Every dominant is different, but one thing is always the same, they know they are one. They might need to learn skills or they might decide they are perfect just the way they are. They can have a submissive or not, they might decide they don't need one, they might decide to have ten. There are no specific rules for being the one; the one can write their own rules.

There are no absolute truths, anything said about them as a group is a partial lie. The only common thread is: they have a burning desire, a need, to control, lead and teach another human being in a course of normal life setting. They know they have something valuable to give another or multiple others. Some say Dominants are born that way; some say it is a learned skill, some see it as a burden; others see it as a relief, some want to engage on temporary or casual basis; some want to live it their whole life; all are true and all are a lie. Just like being alive, you know it, without being able to prove it.

Dominance is a gift, just like submission is. Neither is better than the other. We reach out as humans to our counterparts and give something the other wants. See it, acknowledge it and treasure it. submissives, Dominants are not your emotional punching bag. They want to give and help you develop and learn, but be not mistaken, they are humans too. They have the right to be loved, just as much as you do. If all you see is what they can do for you, you devalue them and in the end you will be disappointed, because they will become this two-dimensional thing you imagine them to be.

Dominants, don't be afraid to reach out if you are having doubts or unsure of yourself and your skills. There is no shame in wanting to learn or in seeking to understand yourself and your world better. You are the masters of your own universe; make it a better place for you. Being sure of things you don't know and need help with show strength not weakness. Become the leader of your own life, take initiative, face your challenges head on, contemplate on your mistakes and strive to understand them. Concentrate on your growth and don't hesitate to change the things you can change and accept the things you cannot. Act and don't react. Lead and do not follow. If you concentrate on your submissives needs and neglect your own, you will disappoint both of you.

And above all else, be you, just the way you are.
